When a parent teaches you to trust no one and to never be vulnerable, will you ever be able to love?

For as long as she can remember, Francesca has longed to be free of her dad, Phillip; to finally be able to get away from him and their toxic relationship.

Though as she knows she can't leave without taking her younger sister, Jenny, with her, and her father refuses to let Jenny go without a fight, Francesca realizes she must do whatever it takes in order to stand up for herself and what she believes is right, for once in her life.

During this tug-of-war, Francesca is forced to rely on the only defense mechanism she knows when it comes to dealing with her dad - finding her voice and self-confidence through ballet - just like her mother taught her.

As a last resort, Francesca agrees to enter into a risky deal with her dad, where the winner gets custody over Jenny, and she is willing to give up everything to win. But when she suddenly comes face to face with a situation, and a person, she cannot ignore, she soon realizes that not everything is quite so easy to give up after all, and she finds herself struggling to make a choice before it's too late...

For Francesca's last chance to save her sister, will her vulnerability be a blessing or a curse?
