7 Secrets Commercial Cleaning Companies Don't Want You To Know: Office Cleaning Is More Than Dusting and Vacuuming Christopher Banner

The office cleaning industry is a hodge-podge assortment of companies with little or no industry oversight. That means that almost anyone can hang out a shingle and call themselves a commercial cleaning company. Because of this low threshold to entry, you are likely to receive less than stellar systematic cleaning service. And sometimes the people getting into the business do not have the good business sense for running a cleaning company. Not only that, several of the large national companies are only selling by price and cutting quality of service. How can you protect yourself? In this book the author reveals several of the failings in the janitorial service industry that you need to protect yourself and your business against. There are conditions in this industry that attract people whose only motive is to start a business and make a bunch of money. This also drives them to cut corners. You'll notice they seldom have a specific system for cleaning that insures a professional cleaning job. You need to protect your company, your employees and your customers, clients or patients from poor quality cleaning. You can do that by familiarizing yourself with some of the shocking secrets that crop up in the office cleaning industry. You can also follow some of the safeguards he has outlined in this book to make it easier for you.
