Autistic Voyage: Living with Autism through my son(he is truly a blessing) Wyletta Dilworth-Johnson
As the parent of a child with autism, you dream of how perfect your children would be. I believed that my Darius was perfect, but then they said something was wrong with him. They said he would never talk, they said he couldn't comprehend. They couldn't even tell me why. They don't know my God, and I didn't know my strength. My first mistake was that I hadn't considered God's plan, but when I did, I was a force to be reckoned with. I grabbed autism by the horns and I refused to let go. We may have autism, but autism does not have us. Although we will always be at war with autism, we may never be considered "normal" and may always be laughed at and ridiculed. We know that God makes no mistakes for we are exactly where we should be. On this journey, we cry, we laugh, we fail, and we succeed, but through it all, we have joy and they can't take that away. As an autism mom, I strive to uplift, encourage, and inspire. It is my daily prayer that I change at least one person's perception of autism. I pray that they are no longer judgmental and/or inconsiderate. Please think before you speak. On this autistic journey, we experience the good, the bad, and the ugly, but I wouldn't detour from this path for the world. I will fight for my Darius and I will win-for I am clothed in the whole armor of God.
