The signs of Positive Youth Development are everywhere. Across the country, more than 7 million youth are learning to lead through the 4-H. As many as 200,000 girls, ages 11 to 17, are serving their communities through the Girl Scouts. More than 40,000 young people have already worked to rehabilitate their own neighborhoods through YouthBuild. And that's just the beginning. From organizing fundraisers to cleaning up parks, groups of young people in every city and town across the Nation are engaged in both organized and grassroots efforts to enrich their neighborhoods, their schools, and their futures. In many communities, youth have taken activism a step further by participating directly in policy decisions that impact their lives.
