Brigid's Way is a collection of poems and reflections on the Celtic goddess Brigid and the namesake Abbess of Kildare who is one of Ireland's patron saints. Brigid, as both goddess and saint, is a potent icon of the Celtic divine feminine consciousness that has survived various changes in the spiritual and religious life of Ireland over millenia.

The poems take as their starting point folklore about the St. Brigid and the goddess, who was one of the Tuatha dé Danaan. They weave in her symbols, attributes and associations. This is both an ancient Brigid of the mythic past, as well as a modern Brigid concerned with climate change and social justice.

Brigid's stories abound with thresholds and liminality. In this time of swift change and social challenge Brigid is an ideal icon for 21st century women and men.
