THE PRE- WEDDING ACTIVITIES

Once you decide that you want to get married, there are several activities that you should begin engaging in regardless of whether or not you are dating. These include:

1. Saving For Your Wedding

Set aside a set amount of cash each month in a high interest saving account to begin saving for your wedding. Don't consider it a waste of money because even if you never get married, you will have a nice stash for you to use as you please.

2. Visualizing Your Dream Wedding

Create a vision board by cutting pictures that appeal to you from wedding magazines and pasting them onto a board to begin designing your dream wedding.

Then, schedule time see yourself walking down the aisle with your mind's eye. Feel your future spouse next to you, the mood at the ceremony, the time of the year and hour of the day you sign the certificate. See the color scheme and theme of your reception blending with your bridesmaid's attire and hear the laughter of family and friends as they enjoy the cake and drinks.

3. Living Your Dream Post-Wedding Life

Begin living the type of life you want to live after your wedding to increase your chances of meeting your "dream spouse". For example if you want to be married to a God loving, Christian professional who enjoys hiking, then you should consider becoming a genuine God loving Christian as you advance yourself professionally and take time off to go on nature hikes.

THE WEDDING PLANNING TIMELINE

This wedding planning timeline does not give you the time in months because some people have 12 months to plan a wedding, others 12 weeks while others just 12 days.

This wedding planning guide is therefore to help you organize the activities you need to look into as you plan any wedding regardless of how much time you have to prepare for the big day.

a) Collect The Money

Deciding on how much the you and the groom want to spend on the wedding and honeymoon is important step because it helps you create a budget as well as begin locating wedding service providers within your price range.

To help you collect the money for your wedding, you can:

1. Pool the money that you and the groom have set aside for the wedding into a high interest savings account that is separate from your daily expenses account.
2. Ask both your parents if they want to assist you financially to meet the wedding costs.
