Not seeing what isn't there—can kill you.

Either a dead madman is haunting her, or Kendra is going insane. With her little girl sharing her peril, Kendra must choose between realities, but how can she decide? Her life has always depended on family and friends. Will the same hold true for fighting the impossible—a ghost? Or will Kendra's indecision get them all killed? As Kendra summons courage to make her choice, only one thing is certain. Not seeing what isn't there—can kill you.

(Incidental violence. Author suggests parents read Vapor before letting 12-year-olds read it.)
