The Advanced Projection Manual Torkell Sætervadet

The intention behind The Advanced Projection Manual is to provide projectionists and cinema engineers alike with a practical guide to projection of classic films with modern equipment. The book will also be useful for others treating or dealing with historic film material, such as film archivists and cinématèque programmers.

The raison d'être of this book is to enable films to be presented in exactly the way they were originally intended to be presented, without any compromises with regard to picture, sound and appearance.

This manual has been initiated and published by the FIAF, the International Federation of Film Archives, in co-operation with the Norwegian Film Institute. It is aimed particularly at the technical staff of FIAF member organisations such as national film archives, museums and institutes. However, it will be equally useful to others screening classic films, such as staff at educational organisations, independent reportary cinemas, and commercial cinemas with classic films on their programmes.

The book includes over 300 illustrations.
